

From Central Space to Urban Place

Urbanisation processes in Viking Age and Medieval Odense and Aalborg, Denmark

Edited by Mads Runge, Malene Refshauge Beck,
Mikael Manøe Bjerregaard & Torben Birk Sarauw

From Central Space to Urban Place

Urbanisation processes in
Viking Age and Medieval
Odense and Aalborg, Denmark

From Central Space to Urban Place

Urbanisation processes in
Viking Age and Medieval
Odense and Aalborg, Denmark

Edited by:

*Mads Runge, Malene Refshauge Beck,
Mikael Manøe Bjerregaard & Torben Birk Sarauw*

Kulturhistoriske studier i centralitet – Archaeological & Historical Studies in Centrality, vol. 5 2021

Research Centre Centrum – Odense City Museums
University Press of Southern Denmark

From Central Space to Urban Place

Published by Odense City Museums & University Press of Southern Denmark

ISBN: 978-87-90267-51-3

© The editors and the respective authors 2021

Editors: Mads Runge, Malene Refshauge Beck, Mikael Manøe Bjerregaard & Torben Sarauw

Print: Specialtrykkeriet Arco

Graphic design: Bjørn Koch Klausen

Frontcover & backcover: Bjørn Koch Klausen

Translation: Anne Bloch and David Earle Robinson, HSLs, Ebeltoft

Distribution:

Odense City Museums

Overgade 48

DK-5000 Odense C

Danmark

museum@odense.dk

www.odensebymuseer.dk

University Press of Southern Denmark

Campusvej 55

DK-5230 Odense M

press@forlag.sdu.dk

www.universitypress.dk

Funded by the VELUX FONDEN's museums programme.

Contents

Preface. From Central Space to Urban Place: A research and communication project	14
1. Introduction	20
1.1. Aims and background	20
1.2. Methods and theories.....	21
2. Topography	23
2.1. Around Odense Fjord	23
2.1.1. The general landscape forms and their formation	23
2.1.2. The two fjord systems in Odense's hinterland	24
2.1.3. Coastal morphology and navigation conditions	26
2.2. Navigation conditions in the lower reaches of Odense Å	29
2.3. Aalborg's hinterland	32
2.3.1. The eastern Limfjord	33
2.3.2. Navigation conditions in the Limfjord	34
Part 1: Centrality and central places in the landscape	37
3. Place names and centrality around Odense and Aalborg in the Iron Age and Viking Age	38
3.1. Place names and centrality	38
3.1.1. Name-environment theory	38
3.1.2. Interpretation and understanding of centrality in place names	40
3.1.3. The two study areas: delimitation, sources and collection	41
3.2. Central-place indicators in the onomastic record.....	41
3.3. Place names and centrality in the Odense area	43
3.3.1. Power and elite	43
3.3.2. Place names, cult and religion	44
3.3.3. Trade and crafts	44
3.3.4. Judicial functions	45
3.3.5. Defence, war and control	45
3.4. Place names and centrality in the Aalborg area	46
3.4.1. Power and elite	46
3.4.2. Place names, cult and religion	47
3.4.3. Trade and crafts	48
3.4.4. Judicial functions	48
3.4.5. Defence, war and control	48
3.5. Conclusion	49

4. Road network	50
4.1. Introduction.....	50
4.2. Reflections on maps and roads	50
4.3. Odense.....	51
4.3.1. The significance of natural conditions around Odense Fjord	51
4.3.2. The historical road network (as shown on Royal Society and Original 1 maps) in the Odense area	52
4.3.3. Watersheds	53
4.3.4. Dating the roads	53
4.4. Aalborg	54
4.4.1. The significance of the landscape for the infrastructure in the eastern Limfjord area	54
4.4.2. The historical road network (as shown on Royal Society and Original 1 maps) in the Aalborg area	56
4.4.3. Watersheds	59
4.4.4. Dating of the roads	59
4.5. Barrows and ancient roads.....	60
4.6. Other archaeological finds and their relationship to the roads.....	64
4.6.1. Runestones	64
4.6.2. Metal-detector finds	65
4.6.3. The road network AD 400-1100	65
4.6.3.1. Aalborg	65
4.6.3.2. Odense	67
4.7. The road network and urbanisation	67
5. Metal-rich sites in the hinterlands of Odense and Aalborg	69
5.1. The two study areas – general delimitation	69
5.1.1. Odense’s hinterland	69
5.1.2. Aalborg’s hinterland	69
5.2. Source-critical considerations	72
5.2.1 Comparison of the two study areas	72
5.2.2. Chronological limits and dating methods	73
5.2.3. The artefact material – acquisition and extent	75
5.2.4. Definitions – classification of sites and material	75
5.3. Analysis of the artefact material	76
5.3.1. Hot crafts	76
5.3.2. Cold crafts	79
5.3.3. Trade	80
5.3.3.1. Weights	80
5.3.3.2. Weighing scales	82

5.3.3.3. Coins and hack silver	82
5.3.3.4. Imports	87
5.3.4. Ornaments and other costume accessories	94
5.3.5. Militaria	102
5.3.6. Equestrian equipment	104
5.3.7. Other special finds	105
5.4. Analyses of the relations between the finds complexes and conditions in their surroundings	107
5.4.1. The extent and location of the finds complexes in the landscape	108
5.4.2. The dating frames for the finds complexes	111
5.4.3. The relationship of the finds complexes to barrows	114
5.4.4. The finds complexes' relationship to Medieval rural settlements	115
5.4.5. The relationship of the finds complexes to central-place-indicating place names	117
5.4.6. The relationship of the finds complexes to the infrastructure	119
5.5. Towards Odense and Aalborg – similarities and differences in the metal-detector finds	122
5.6. Future research areas associated with the metal-rich sites	128
6. Conclusions and perspectives after subproject 1	129
Part 2: Central place, city and hinterland – structure, interaction and specialization	131
7. Settlement, trades and crafts	132
7.1. Introduction	132
7.2. Settlement in Aalborg and Odense	133
7.2.1. Odense and Aalborg – the archaeological record	133
7.2.2. The origins of the towns	134
7.2.3. The houses in the towns	135
7.2.4. Streets and plots	138
7.2.5. Mint and royal residence	140
7.2.6. Mills	141
7.2.7. Crafts	142
7.2.8. Fishery	143
7.2.9. Trade	144
7.2.10. Conclusion	146
7.3. Large-scale production? Pithouses and urbanisation	148
7.3.1. Pithouses in the study areas	148
7.3.2. The function of the pithouses	152
7.3.3. Weaving and spinning – comparative analyses and the production	153
7.3.4. Specialisation and large-scale production – discussion	155
7.4. Specialisation of metal crafts	157

7.4.1. Source criticism	157
7.4.2. Traces of specialised metal crafts	157
7.4.3. Traces of metal crafts in excavated rural settlements.....	158
7.4.4. Metal crafts represented in the metal-detector finds	160
7.4.5. Brooch types as indicators of production areas and contacts	161
7.4.5.1. Late Germanic Iron Age	161
7.4.5.2. Viking Age.....	161
7.4.5.3. Early Middle Ages	163
7.4.6. Metalwork in Odense and Aalborg – centralisation or specialisation?	163
7.4.7. Summary.....	164
7.4.7.1. Funen	164
7.4.7.2. Northern Jutland	165
7.4.8. Increased specialisation of metal crafts?.....	166
7.5. From space to place in a rural perspective.....	167
7.5.1. The rural perspective on early urban development – a theoretical coupling	169
7.5.2. Method	169
7.5.3. Results	170
7.5.3.1. Odense, Funen	171
7.5.3.2. Aalborg, northern Jutland.....	171
7.5.4. Landscape-organisational principles – impact of rural change.....	175
7.5.5. Conclusion.....	179
7.6. Archaeobotanical and zooarchaeological surveys of plant and animal remains from the 4 th -11 th centuries AD in the Odense and Aalborg study areas	180
7.6.1. Introduction	180
7.6.2. Materials and methods	180
7.6.3. Taphonomy, differential preservation and sample size.....	183
7.6.4. Results of the archaeobotanical analyses.....	187
7.6.4.1. Plant exploitation in the Odense area.....	187
7.6.4.2. Plant exploitation in the eastern Limfjord area	188
7.6.4.3. Plant exploitation in the Odense and eastern Limfjord areas.....	189
7.6.5. Results of the zooarchaeological analyses	191
7.6.5.1. The Odense area	192
7.6.5.2. The eastern Limfjord area.....	193
7.6.6. Central spaces and urban places in the Odense and eastern Limfjord areas	194
7.7. From space to place – settlement, trade and subsistence	197
8. The military expression and organisation of power	199
8.1. Introduction.....	199
8.2. Military structures	200

8.2.1. Terrestrial defensive structures	200
8.2.1.1. Early fortifications.....	200
8.2.1.2. Harald Bluetooth's ring fortress.....	201
8.2.1.3. A rampart around Viking Age Odense?	205
8.2.1.4. Aalborg's Viking Age defences.....	206
8.2.1.5. Other defensive structures associated with Aalborg	211
8.2.1.6. Banks and castle mounds from the Middle Ages	211
8.2.2. Fortifications related to water	215
8.2.2.1. Barrages.....	215
8.2.2.2. Harbours and the leding (i.e. war) fleet	217
8.2.2.3. Warning systems	220
8.3. Military equipment and warriors	224
8.3.1. War booty sites.....	224
8.3.2. Weapon graves.....	225
8.3.3. Stray finds of weapons and weapon components	226
8.3.4. Human bones exhibiting injuries.....	228
8.3.5. Place names and runestones with relations to warriors	228
8.4. Combined description of the military aspects in the two study areas	229
8.4.1. General patterns in the evidence	229
8.4.2. Late Iron Age-Early Viking Age	230
8.4.2.1. Ladby and Glavendrup	230
8.4.2.2. The Aalborg area	234
8.4.3. Late Viking Age – Early Middle Ages	234
8.4.3.1. Nonnebakken and Odense.....	234
8.4.3.2. Aggersborg and Aalborg	237
8.5. Comparative analysis	238
8.5.1. Chronological development	238
8.5.2. The ring fortresses and the new power configurations	238
8.5.3. The significance of military aspects in the two study areas.....	239
8.6. From space to place in the military indicators	240
9. Cult and religion	241
9.1. Introduction.....	241
9.2. Accumulating wealth in pre-Christian religious Scandinavia	242
9.2.1. A religious perspective on growth – a theoretical and methodological approach	243
9.2.2. Religious buildings in pre-Christian times – practice or diktat.....	243
9.2.3. Economy and organisation in pre-Christian times	248
9.2.4. Organisation.....	250
9.2.5. Structural economic accumulation.....	250

9.2.6. Accumulated economic wealth	251
9.2.7. On Scandinavia's periphery.....	251
9.2.8. Discussion and conclusion.....	252
9.2.9. Acknowledgements.....	253
9.3. Crown and Church in early Aalborg and Odense.....	254
9.3.1. Introduction.....	254
9.3.2. Aalborg.....	254
9.3.2.1. St. Clement	254
9.3.2.2. The cult of St. Clement and Aalborg.....	256
9.3.2.3. St. Botolph.....	259
9.3.2.4. Our Lady.....	261
9.3.2.5. St. Peter.....	263
9.3.3. Odense	263
9.3.3.1. From St. Alban to St. Canute	264
9.3.3.2. St. Alban.....	264
9.3.3.3. Royal seat and bishop's residence.....	265
9.3.3.4. Cult of saints at the church of St. Canute.....	266
9.3.4. Conclusion	267
9.4. The urban monastery in the Early Middle Ages – actor or sleeping partner? A discussion of urban monastic institutions based on the monasteries in Odense, Randers and Aalborg.....	268
9.4.1. Introduction.....	268
9.4.2. Definition of problems	268
9.4.3. The selected monasteries.....	269
9.4.4. The early rural Medieval monastery as a “central place”.....	269
9.4.4.1. The monastery and crafts.....	269
9.4.4.2. The monastery and trade	270
9.4.5. Early monasteries in urban research	270
9.4.6. Early monasteries in Odense, Aalborg and Randers	271
9.4.6.1. Nonnebakken in Odense.....	272
9.4.6.2. St. Canute's monastery in Odense.....	275
9.4.6.3. Our Lady's nunnery in Aalborg.....	276
9.4.6.4. Our Lady's nunnery in Randers	279
9.4.6.5. Conclusion	280
9.4.7. Discussion: The function of the early urban monasteries	281
9.4.8. The urban monasteries of the Early Middle Ages as “central places”	284
9.5. From space to place in the sphere of cult and religion.....	285
10. Conclusions and perspectives after subproject 2	286

Part 3: From central place to town – dynamics and drivers in the early urbanisation process.....	289
11. From central place to town – dynamics and drivers in the early urbanisation process	290
11.1. Introduction	290
11.2. The growth factors in the two study areas in a diachronous perspective	291
11.2.1. Landscape background and infrastructure	291
11.2.2. The agrarian economy and settlement.....	292
11.2.3. Trade and crafts	294
11.2.3.1. Odense	294
11.2.3.2. Aalborg.....	295
11.2.4. Military.....	296
11.2.4.1. Odense	296
11.2.4.2. Aalborg.....	297
11.2.4.3. Summary	297
11.2.5. Religion.....	298
11.2.5.1. Odense	298
11.2.5.2. Aalborg.....	298
11.2.5.3. Summary	299
11.2.6. Other growth factors	299
11.2.6.1. Odense	299
11.2.6.2. Aalborg.....	300
11.3. Before the towns (project phases 1 and 2)	300
11.3.1. Source criticism and methods.....	300
11.3.2. Organisational entities	301
11.3.3. The Odense Fjord area	301
11.3.3.1. Bjerger hundred	301
11.3.3.2. Other hundreds.....	302
11.3.4. The eastern Limfjord area	302
11.3.5. Comparative analysis of the structure and growth factors in the two study areas prior to urbanisation	303
11.4. The formation of the towns (project phases 2-3).....	305
11.4.1. Societal conditions for urbanisation between emporia and civitates	305
11.4.2. Urban definition.....	305
11.4.3. Odense.....	306
11.4.4. Aalborg.....	307
11.4.5. Comparative analysis of the backgrounds for Odense and Aalborg.....	309
11.5. After establishment of the towns (project phase 3).....	310
11.5.1. Odense and Aalborg in the 10th century	310
11.5.2. Odense in the late 10th and 11th centuries	311
11.5.3. Aalborg in the late 10th and 11th centuries	311

11.5.4. Comparative analysis of Odense and Aalborg's relations with their hinterlands during phase 3	312
11.6. Synthesis and perspectives	313
Appendices	317
Appendix 1. Source-critical factors relating to metal-detector finds	318
Recovery and submission of the finds	318
Removal from the original context	318
Time spent in the plough soil	319
Horizontal displacement	319
Degradation	319
Recovery history and methods in the two study areas	319
Museums of Eastern Funen	320
Odense City Museums	321
Historical Museum of Northern Jutland	322
Appendix 2. Pithouses in the study area around Aalborg	324
Appendix 3. Pithouses in the study area around Odense	325
Appendix 4. ¹⁴ C-dated pithouses in the two study areas	326
Appendix 5. Ritual buildings from the 1 st millennium in the archaeological record	328
Appendix 6. Economic aspects of old Nordic religion in Medieval literature	330
Bibliography	335
List of contributors	365